

This Christmas we reflect on a cup that's not half full or half empty, but on one that's overflowing!

This year, life has delivered many challenges, but God has brought us blessings through them.

Jeanne broke her leg back in February and it looked like she'd not be walking on it again. God stepped in—through the lives of some generous folks—and provided an overhead lift system so Sam could safely get her around in the house.

While there has been a significant decline in Jeanne's health this year, she—including the entire family—thoroughly enjoyed her 80th birthday celebration. God worked that day into a success far beyond our expectations.

Sam's eyesight may be a bit worse, but because of God's grace, he was able to put together study lessons on Romans for his Sunday School class—and is currently teaching them with his large print notes. He's also been able to enjoy 'reading' books via CD.

With Jeanne bound to a wheelchair, getting in and out of the car became an impossibility. Again, God provided a solution with a special van.

We had not been able to travel beyond Salem in a while, but—with the help of our kids and grandkids, plus a mobile lift—we've been able to make a couple of trips to Seattle & see Stucky relatives.

We look forward to celebrating our 57th anniversary on the 17th and know that our Great God will, once again, shower us with blessings ... and remind us that, indeed, our cup is overflowing!

Thank you for your part in filling our cup. May you also see evidence of God's overflowing blessings in your cup of life—starting this Christmas & New Year season and into 2012!
